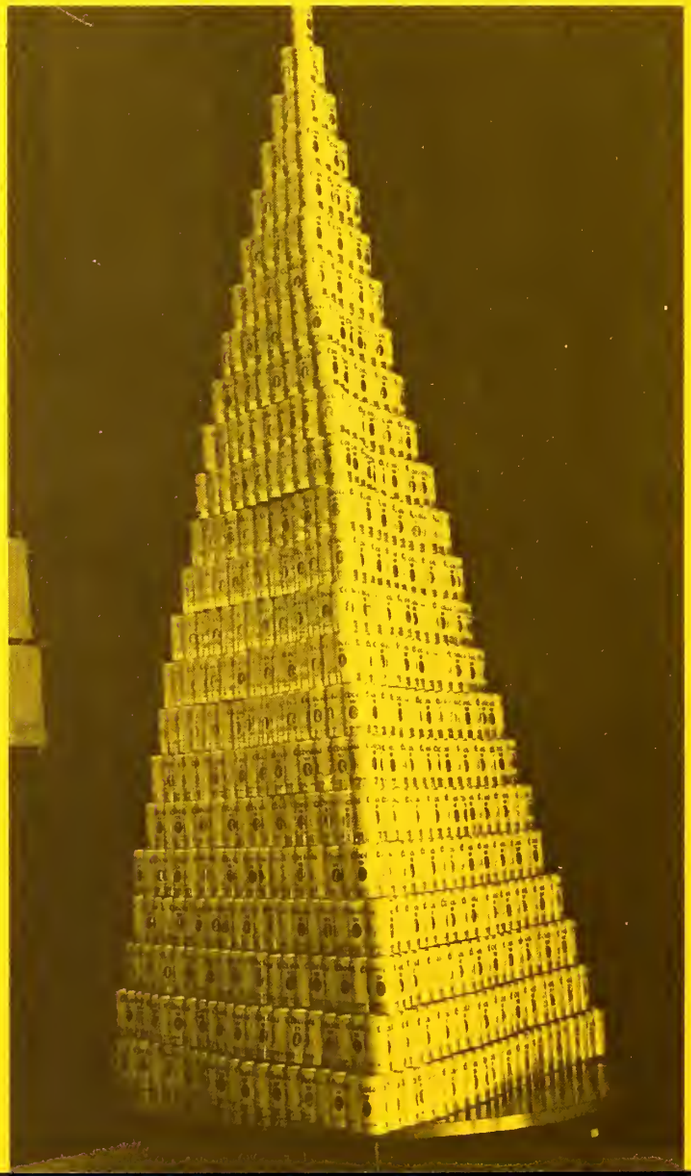
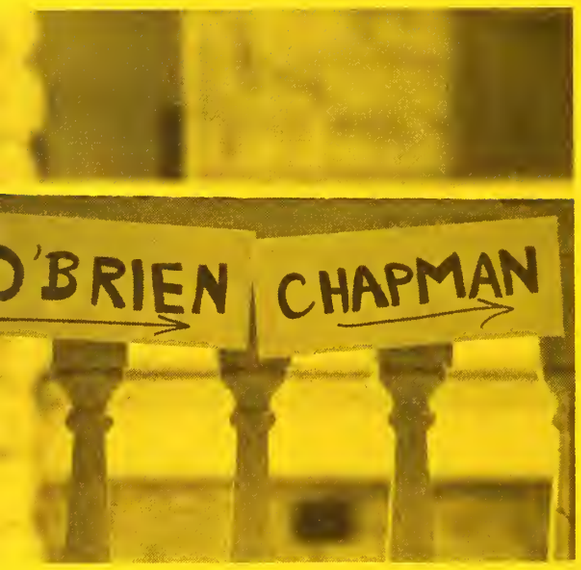
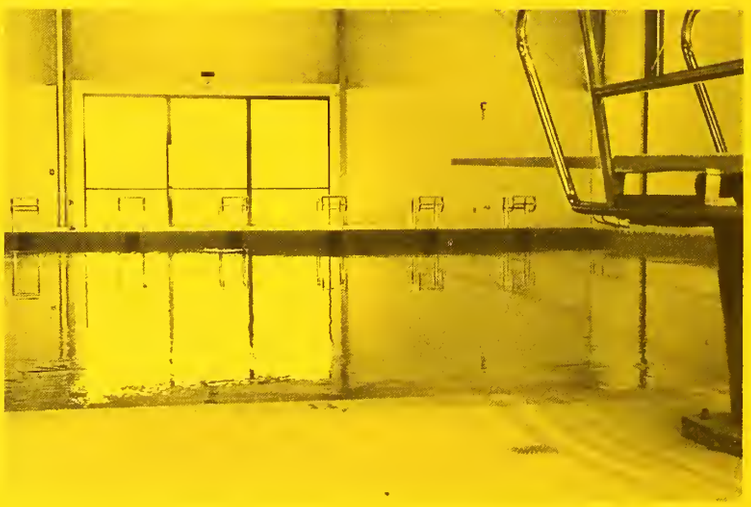
It has been said,
"A rose by any other name would smell as sweet." Yet when we call Southwestern "Camelot," visions of ivory towers and fairy tales are conjured up.



Calling it "The Country Club" brings to mind a leisurely party atmosphere.





It is left to each individual to decide for himself what Southwestern University is.

However, it takes little imagination to note the similarities between attending S.U. and playing a game-the elements of risk, strategy, and separation from the real world are common to both.

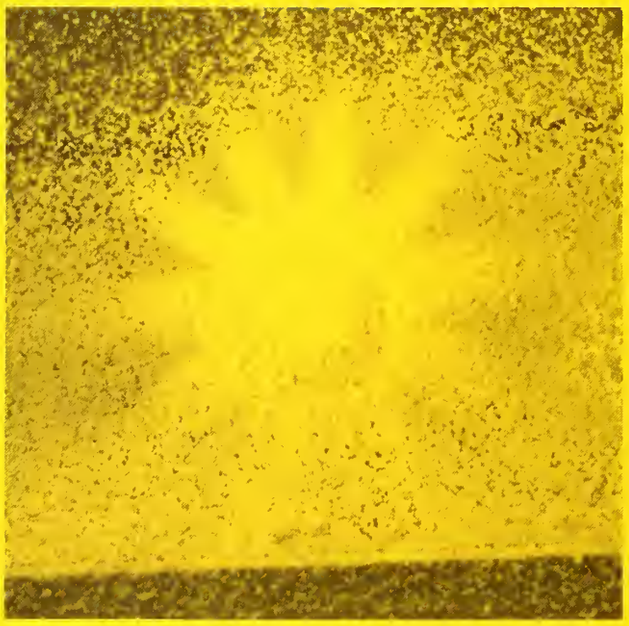
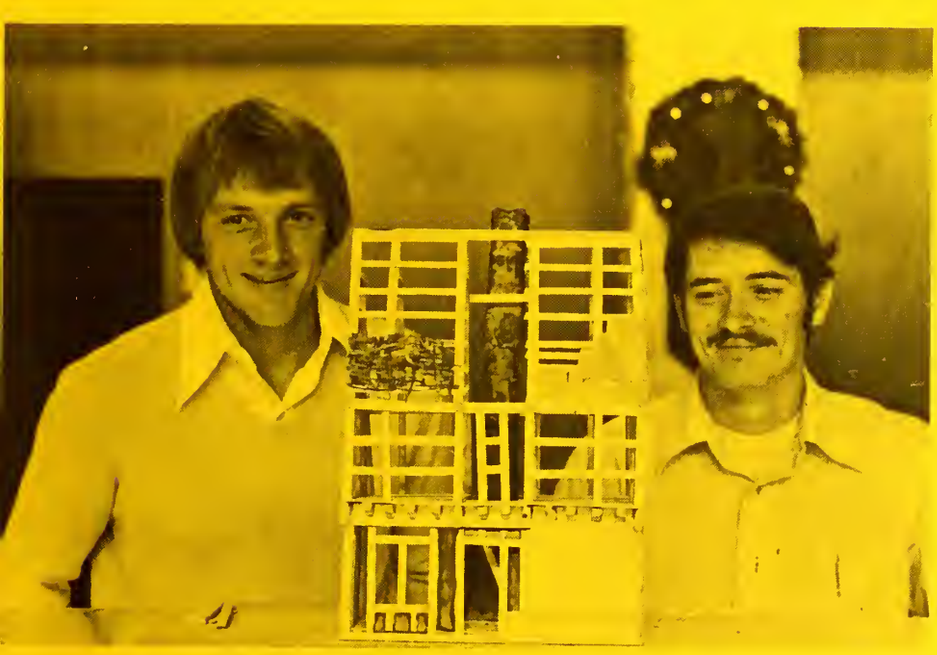
Thus the game begins.

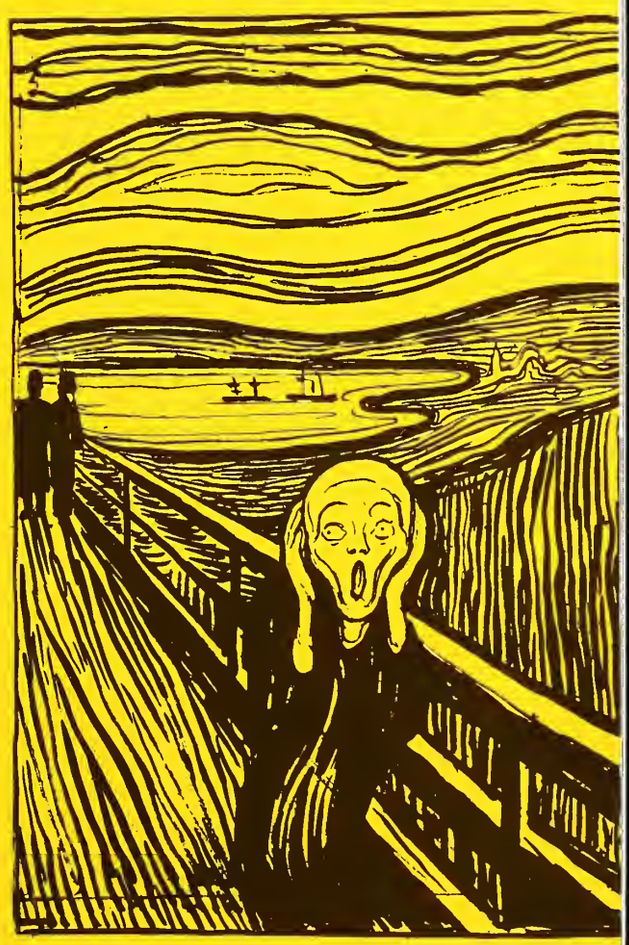




But what of the players?

Faced by changing rules and fortunes, they have to struggle to stay ahead of the game, and, hopefully, win.

Some become cynical and withdrawn.



Others rise to the challenge and play the game with verve and charm.

But for all, the game must end.

And when they leave, all who have been here take with them a set of experiences, both good and bad, which will affect the way they view their world from now on.

BROWN CHALLENGE CALLS FOR CASH

Question: What's brown on the outside, green on the inside and awfully confusing sometimes?

Answer: The Brown Challenge.

In the year since the Brown Foundation, Inc. of Houston unveiled the 10-year matching funds program for Southwestern University, the plan has become known as the Brown Challenge and has occupied a central place in the school's fund-raising efforts.

Different incentives and matching formulas are offered for various contributors to the challenge, with seperate "rules" for new gifts, for increased gifts and for gifts from certain class years.

Fortunately, at least one person can keep the formulas straight. Named last year as the director of the Brown Challenge, Mr. Marc Raney reported that the program's 1976 goal was met and exceeded.

Students got into the act, too, giving over $900 in the student respinse to the Brown Challenge. And for the next several years, the students as well as the University's other constituancies can expect to be kept aware of the needs of the Brown Challenge, the program which has been hailed as a "breakthrough" and as a key to future improvement of Southwestern.

Marc Raney, Director of the Brown Challenge, explains the program's main points.

HIP: A STAR IS BORN

In the fall of 1976, Southwestern's freshman students were offered a new program: Humanities in Practice (Praxis, if you prefer.) The program was designed and initiated by a committee consisting of Dr. Martha Allen, Dr. Karen Fiser, Dr. Bob Hoffert, and Dr. Farley Snell. The committee also obtained a $49,924 grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities, making the program possible.

The program was taught by Dr. Martha Allen, Dr. Karen Fiser, Dr. Jack Harris, Dr. Walter Herbert, Dr. Ellsworth Peterson, and Dr. Farley Snell. Other faculty members, as well as outside individuals, participated in the HIP program in their fields of specialization. According to Dr. Allen, the program was designed to stimulate intellectual self-reliance, theoretical complexity, aesthetic sensitivity, curricular and existential integrations, and basic skills development.

By participating in the HIP program, students obtained eighteen semester hours of credit, half in the fall semester and half in the spring semester. In the fall, they received three hours credit in each of three areas — English Composition, Literature, and Philosophy. In the spring they were credited with three hours of American History and six hours chosen from Religion, Fine Arts, and Humanities.

In the fall, students undertook a general study of Humanities, and in the spring, applied what they learned to the study of a specific time and place: Chicago in the years between 1885 and 1915. Students completed projects, including musical and dramatic programs characteristic of those found in Chicago at the turn of the century. To top it off, students were offered a train trip to Chicago to visit the historical locales and architectural works they had encountered in their studies.

Participating students and faculty members alike agree that the innovative HIP program was a success and provided valuable experiences for all involved.

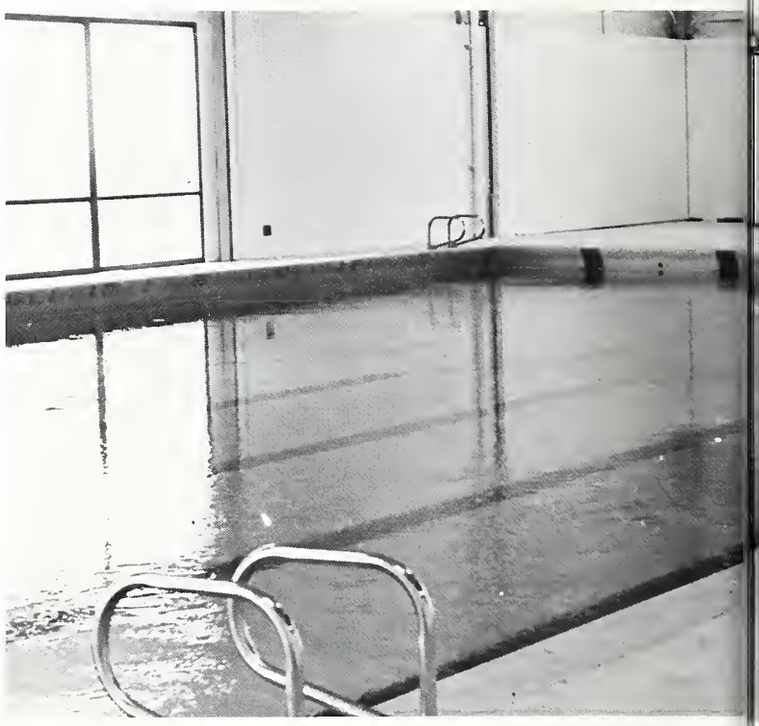
NEW GYM



In 1972, the Sid W. Richardson Foundation gave Southwestern a gift of $1 million. The money was to be used in any manner desired — as long as it were used to build a new gymnasium.

Thus was born the Sid W. Richardson Physical Education Center. By the time the building was completed, it cost around $2.1 million. Many students and faculty members felt the funds spent on the new building's construction could have been used more advantageously, but, like it or not, the new gym is an undeniable reality.

The new Center was officially opened on Sept. 25 amid much excitement. Containing a large gymnasium, a natatorium. racquet - and handball courts, offices, training rooms and seminar rooms, it is three times the size of the older Jim West Gymnasium. Many students enjoyed using the new facility, but were disappointed to find it locked many times when it was supposed to be open — too little funding was available to keep it open on a regular basis.

RESTORATION

Blend Cullen and Birdwell, add a dash of restoration and a pinch of renovation, mix everything up completely, and the result is the MAD building.

First, in 1975, a grant from the Birdwell Foundation allowed temporary renovation of Mood Hall.

Then at the beginning of 1976, the occupants of the Administration Building took up residence in Mood Hall, and thus was forged the MAD Building.

Meanwhile the old Ad Building underwent complete restoration and renovation through funds from the Cullen Foundation, with work completed in the summer of 1977.

Now it's Mood's turn again with permanent restoration underway as almost all the occupants moved to the Ad Building and to Ruter.

ALMOST all the occupants. Mood Man become Ruter Man or even — perish the thought — Ad Man? Never.

COMMONS

Sniff-sniff.

"Skunk die?"

"Nope. Supper."

Yes, Gastrodome, three times daily you are the object of pilgrimage by the denizens of the campus community who count on you for sustenance.

But dining in the commons is more than just eating. The commons is fun . . .

The salad bar is fun. "It's a crowd-pleaser," beamed director Alan Jones at Food Service Committee meetings. Yep. What crowd isn't pleased by brown lettuce and rancid cottage cheese?

The guessing games are fun. Will it be bird bodies or mystery meat? Or maybe even the famous Killer Burrito? Even in the line, there are guessing games to play. What's this on my fork? Does that green substance on my plate have a name? Will it crawl off the plate by itself?

The psuedo-security games are the most fun of all. Off-campus students in the Commons? Ridiculous. They'd rush right up to that new salad bar and run off with hundreds of dollars worth of brown lettuce and rancid . . . you know the rest.

But somehow, Gastrodome, you kept us from starving for another year. Better luck next time.

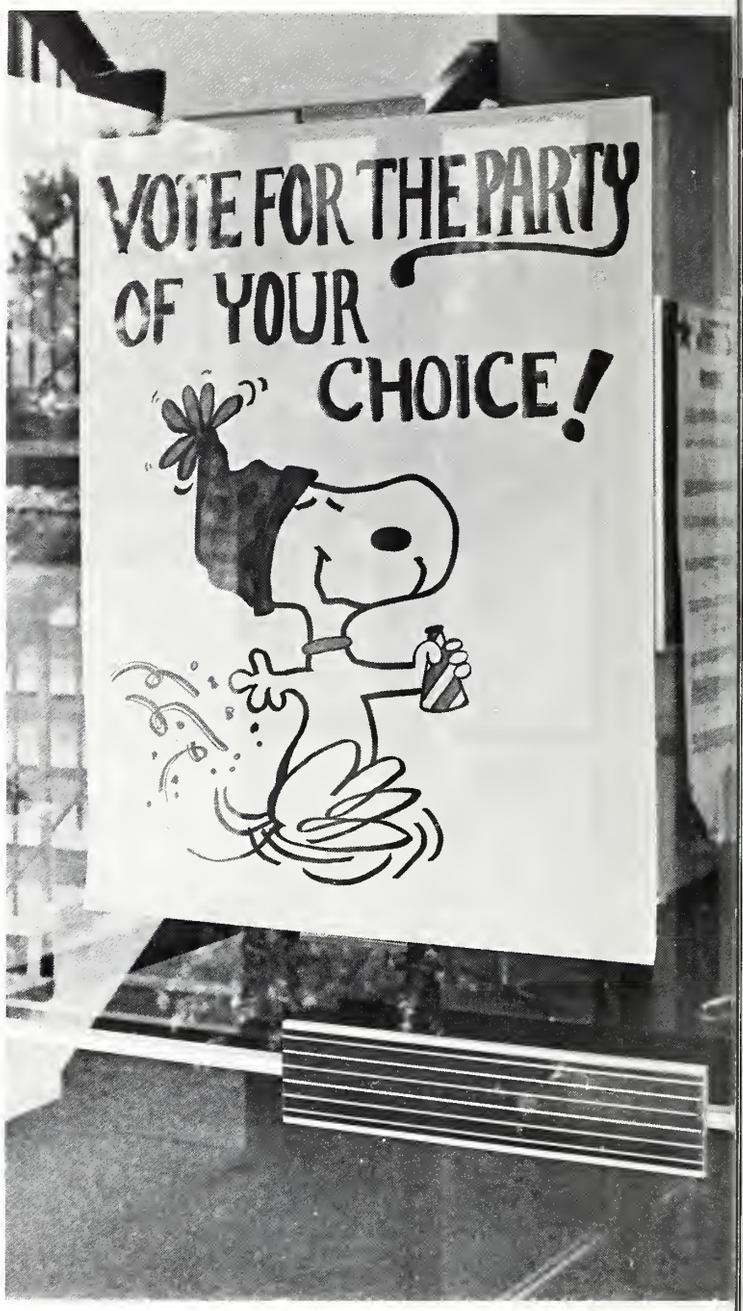
IT WAS AN ELECTION YEAR . . .



1976 was an election year. As Fall progressed, the trees shed their leaves as usual, but buttons bloomed on lapels, posters shot up around campus, mail boxes sprouted printed propaganda, and car bumpers grew stickers. It was impossible to avoid knowing the polls would soon by open.

Southwestern's campus was visited by political figures and their backers from local, state, and national offices. Some came to campaign. Others, not up for re-election, spoke on various topics and answered — or evaded — questions from students.

Beer joints in Georgetown? Not on your life!

It was the election we had all been waiting for.

"Hey, if we win the wet/dry election next Saturday, we won't have to go all the way to Round Rock any more!"

Tee-hee.

Good old Georgetown, bastion of temperance, allowing the likes of the Dew-Drop Inn within its corporate limits? Foolish dreamer.

There was a glimmer of possibility, on that Saturday in February, that change was at hand and that the sale of (gasp) alcoholic beer and fermented wine would be approved by the voters of Justice Precinct 1.

But it didn't happen that way, whether it be because of heavy publicity by the "drys," inaction during pre-election times by the "wets," or even the wording of the proposition itself, which did not differentiate between sales for on- or off-premises consumption.

For whatever reasons, the road to Round Rock is traveled heavily by SU students, and may continue to be for some time to come.

UNION

From camping in Big Bend National Park to eating jalapenos in the SUB basement, the members of Union committees were there to sponsor programs designed to appeal to a broad audience among the Southwestern student body.

Starting the year with a horror film series, IDEAS AND ISSUES committee went on to bring speakers such as Judge Fite of Dallas, American atheist Dr. Malyn Murray O'Hair and Male liberationist Warren Farrell.

COFFEEHOUSE committee, headquartered in the Sawdust Cafe in the SUB, showcased student talent in musical evenings, as well as playing host to root beer chugging/jalapeno eating/water pistol fighting contests, a visiting magician and the Not Ready for a Small Religious College Players in "Tuesday Night Live".

Edification is the reason for the existence of the FREE UNIVERSITY committee, and course offerings this year included backgammon, bridge, Chinese cooking, self-defense, kicker dancing and sign language, among others.

Almost anything could come from SPOT PROGRAMS committee, and some of its "Productions" were a swordfight during registration, music to dine by in the commons, Novemberfest, and halftime productions at basketball games.

The providers of entertainment on campus were, logically enough, member of the ENTERTAINMENT committee, who booked moovies throughout the year. Among the films the committee sponsored were "Blume in Love," "Fritz the Cat," "Mame," and "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf."

OUTDOOR RECREATION Committee took its members on a series of adventures designed to allow opportunities to explore the Texas wilderness.

Officially in the hands of Director of Student Activities Jaime Gray, Union President Roger Neely and vice-president Adele Spencer, Union programming is aimed toward spanning a broad range of interests to offer enlightenment, diversion and recreation to all members of the SU community who choose to partake.

INTERNATIONAL HOUSE

A Diez y Seis celebration, a Chinese new year's festival, a concert of American folk singing — all were a part of the programming at the International House this year.

Founded in 1974, the "I House" provided its third year of exploration and learning experiences for both its residents and the campus community as a whole. Through its programs, I House residents attempted to foster a better understanding of and a better appreciation of differing cultures. Housing director Bonnie Buckley and program directors Sue and Ellsworth Peterson worked with students to produce such programs as those already mentioned as well as a Hanukkah celebration, screening of "The Blue Angel," a discussion of living in Europe, and slide shows on Chile, Venezuela, Bolivia, Korea, India, and the USSR.

NEW FACILITIES ENHANCE ATHLETICS

Opened and formally dedicated in September, the $2.1 million Sid W. Richardson Physical Education Center provided a spacious new home for Pirate athletes. Including a natatorium, handball and racquetball courts, classroom and office space in addition to the gymnasium area, the Center quickly became the hub of campus sports activities.

Baseball players also got a new "home" this year, as a baseball field was constructed on the old ninth hole of the golf course.

Conclusion?
There can be no real conclusions.
For though words on paper appear static,
they burn, decay, dissolve.
The world goes on faster than we can imagine,
thumbing its nose at our mortality.
As this book is primarily concerned with the past, perhaps it would be best to end it with the Russian proverb which states:
"Dwell on the past and you'll lose an eye.
Forget the past and you'll lose both eyes."

FLASH

These two pages have been left blank for those of you who feel you and/or your group were not adequately represented herein. You can paste your lovely picture here or whatever. Maybe play high school and get the autographs of all your pals.

This volume is dedicated to the memory of
Ms. Janice Bickham
Dr. Wendell Osborn
and
Mr. Harvey Watts in the hope that we all learned something from their lives.
